American Sentry Linden is a large, graceful shade tree with a pyramidal shape that requires little maintenance. Its small, yellow flowers are quite fragrant early in the spring. Its strong branches are resistant to storm damage and dropping branches. It is more resistant to Japanese beetle than other varieties of American Linden. The upright shape and large leaves, make it an excellent street tree, as long as it is kept away from power lines. It is also an excellent choice for formal gardens due to the symmetrical shape.
